

BRIDGEWATER STATE UNIVERSITY
POLICE DEPARTMENT

Policy on Access to University Premises by Private Investigators, Towing Service Drivers, and Auto Repossession Agents

Private investigators, towing service operators, and auto repossessioners, or their agents or employees, acting in their professional capacities, are required to secure permission from the university's chief of police before entering any university controlled premises.

Private investigators will not be allowed inside any crime- or incident scene without the permission of, and an escort provided by, a Bridgewater State University police officer.

Any private investigator, towing service operator, or auto repossessioner who enters onto university property is required to properly identify him- or herself upon the request of a Bridgewater State University police officer.

No private investigator, towing service operator, or auto repossessioner who enters onto university property may be armed with a firearm or other weapon as defined under Massachusetts law, without the advance written permission of the chief of police.
